CARE INSTRUCTIONS

TEAK CONSTRUCTION: Teak is a dense, coarse, close-grained hardwood that contains high levels of resinous oils, making it naturally resistant to moisture, repellent to insects and virtually impervious to the drying effects of the elements; silica, a sand-like substance naturally found in teak, adds superior resistance to fungal decay, water rot, warping, shrinking and swelling; left untreated, teak will develop a silvery patina over time, regular application of a teak sealer will preserve its original finish; all of our teak is sustainably harvested from responsibly managed teak plantations

TEAK CARE: If left outside to age naturally and exposed to the elements, teak will develop a soft, silvery-gray patina over time as the surface pigments fade away, as the color changes, the strength and durability of the teak is not affected; maintaining the golden-brown color of new teak will require regular application and re-application of a teak sealer (we recommend teak sealer because it lasts longer than teak oil); if the furniture will not be used for an extended period of time, we recommend covering with Frontgate furniture covers or storing indoors

TEAK CONSTRUCTION: Teak is a dense, coarse, close-grained hardwood that contains high levels of resinous oils, making it naturally resistant to moisture, repellent to insects and virtually impervious to the drying effects of the elements; silica, a sand-like substance naturally found in teak, adds superior resistance to fungal decay, water rot, warping, shrinking and swelling; left untreated, teak will develop a silvery patina over time, regular application of a teak sealer will preserve its original finish; all of our teak is sustainably harvested from responsibly managed teak plantations

TEAK CARE: If left outside to age naturally and exposed to the elements, teak will develop a soft, silvery-gray patina over time as the surface pigments fade away, as the color changes, the strength and durability of the teak is not affected; maintaining the golden-brown color of new teak will require regular application and re-application of a teak sealer (we recommend teak sealer because it lasts longer than teak oil); if the furniture will not be used for an extended period of time, we recommend covering with Frontgate furniture covers or storing indoors

CUSHION CONSTRUCTION: High-density, high-resiliency polyurethane foam provides years of consistent support without sagging; woven hydrophobic wrap repels moisture and helps prevent water from entering foam; 100% solution dyed covers are antimicrobial, mildew resistant, and easy to clean

CUSHION CARE: After extended or heavy rain, stand cushions on end, with the zipper or seam side down, to drain water and speed drying; clean spills and stains with one cup of chlorine bleach diluted in one gallon of water, testing for colorfastness before cleaning entire surface
